Richard's Ramble! Last week at the CTE Enabling group I attended, Dr John Weaver, a Geologist who is also a university lecturer and a Christian, gave us some reflections on the Pope's recent encyclical, Laudato Si, in which the challenges of climate change (for which the scientific evidence is overwhelming) have been addressed. He also gave us a Biblical perspective on our responsibility to steward the earth appropriately. Some of the consequences of climate change are that we can expect more extremes of weather in the years to come. We can also expect a rise in sea levels. In fact, if the current rate of warming is not arrested, and the ice cap at the North Pole does melt completely, in 50 years' time we will see both London and Hull underwater. So what is the answer? 'Fly, drive and consume for tomorrow we die'? We are people who carry hope with us. We know that ultimately Christ will redeem the earth – the purpose of his coming, as remembered in this advent season, was to begin that process of redemption. He will bring all things under his authority and will undo the actions of sin, recreating the world to its original perfection. In the meantime, we must take seriously our responsibility to be part of that redeeming process. It is during this time that 'creation groans', but our ultimate redemption is also tied up with that of the earth, and even now we can speak out to advance that redemption in the now / not yet kingdom as we await his second advent. God bless, Richard.
